SOURCE

1. On 13 September 1953, Muhlwinkel airfield was unoccupied. Except for a few trees, the grass at the field had been cut. In the western portion of the field, there was a tract of land 400 to 500 meters long with stumps of trees on it which were extracted by the local population for their own consumption. No runway markers were seen.
2. On 23 October, the airfield was unoccupied. The field was covered with withered grass. West of the installation, there was a strip of recently cleared ground. Trees were piled up in this area. No guards were seen at the installation.
3. Prior to 7 October, source observed that the field, which was guarded by four civilians, was still in poor condition.
